GENEALOGY

GENEALOGY: from the Greek genes, race, and logos, discourse. The systematic account of the origin, descent, and relation of families. Thus GENEALOGY is founded on the idea of a lineage or family. Persons descended from a common father constitute a family. A series of several persons, descended from a common progenitor, is called a line. Collateral lines are the several lines which unite in a common progenitor.

Ancestrally it is . . . well to go back as far as one can. The past is the Land of Missing Persons, and it is only by a combination of diligence and good fortune that anyone who is not monumentally remembered can be found there. Some lie at the borders of the wilderness, neither their lives nor their resting places being noticed or marked.

No nation was ever more careful to preserve their genealogies than the Jews. They kept tables of genealogy in their several families, the origins of which were lodged in Jerusalem. Since the last destruction of their city, and the dispersion of the people, their ancient genealogies are lost.

Few families, no matter how distinguished, can trace their ancestry beyond or even as far as the middle of the 11th century. In the twelfth and thirteenth centuries family names began to be more common.

Most of all history is based on family records, and the gathering of families into communities. America - forged from the wilderness by valiant men and women, won to nationhood by their descendants. It behooves us, who owe to them our freedom and all the blessings of American citizenship, to trace and treasure the achievements of America's founders, America's builders, America's liberators.

Knowledge of ancestry is information which all are duty bound to transmit in permanent recorded form for the benefit of their children in particular, and of posterity in general. Failure to record in the present what is now known to be accurate genealogical information will result in the loss of this knowledge in succeeding generations.

King Menelaus to Telemachus, in Homer's "The Odyssey", "Your pedigree has left a stamp upon your looks that makes me take you for the son of a king . . . for no mean folk could breed such a man as you are." "Good breeding cannot be hidden when a man's father has himself been fortunate in birth and happy in his marriage."

Pride of ancestry is common to all ages and all people, and it is an entirely proper and justifiable sentiment. We know that man, like other animals possesses the power to transmit to his offspring the mental and physical characteristics that have been most prominent in himself. Students of social science tell us that the children of criminals are apt to prove criminals themselves, and other things being equal, the man who can trace his descent through a dozen generations of honest men is for that very reason more likely to prove himself an honest man.

We make our mouths; our eyes are the windows of the soul; our noses are a kind of landed estate we carry about with us, that proclaims our ancestry, and no amount of acquired culture can change them.

Man is tributary of the most distant past, and linked to his remotest ancestors by an immaterial but unbroken thread more durable and more impressive than the pyramids of Egypt.

Richardson family

According to Cutter, in "New England Families" there were three immigrants by the name of GODFREY who came to New England before 1638.

Francis Godfrey settled in Duxbury, where he had a grant of land, 1638. He removed to Marshfield and finally Bridgewater. It is believed that the Cape Cod family of Chatham and elsewhere is descended from Francis.

John Godfrey came in the ship "Mary and John" March 24, 1638, lived in Newbury, and Andover. Aged 50 in 1661.

William Godfrey settled at Watertown, removed to Hampton. Died 1667. There is a Godfrey, Watertown, listed in Ancient Names in Boston and Vicinity, 1630 to 1644. (NEH&GR V.I: 195)

There was also a Christopher Godfrey who settled before 1685, at Green's Farms, Fairfield, Conn. The Conn. family is descended from him.

The name of Peter does not appear on these lists. Since he was of Newbury one wonders if John might be related to him.

The BROWNS were early in New England, among them were those who have been referred to as "The Newbury Browns" who went from Ipswich to Newbury, Mass., in 1635, with Rev. Thomas Barker and others. Of these there were four: Thomas Brown and his sons Richard, George and James. Various chroniclers of the Brown family give the names of not less than nine immigrant Browns who were settled within the limits of what is now Essex County, Mass. Some spelled the name BROWNE.

History of Newbury. (The following appear to be our ancestors.HRK)

Thomas Brown(o) of Newbury, came from Southampton, 1635, by the James, in employ of Thomas Antram. Reached Boston 2 June, bringing his wife Mary, who died 2 June 1654, not "1655."

He died, Jan. 8, 1687, "aged 80."

He was a weaver of Malford in Wilts, Eng. Malford is a parish in North Damerham, about 6 miles from Malmsbury in Co. Wilts and called in Camden's Britannia "Christian Malford." He took the freeman's oath, 1639.

His children are listed as:

Mary, b. 1635, the first English child of the town.

M. 13 May 1656, Peter (1) Godfrey.

d. 16 Apr 1716.

Francis, b. Eng. M. 1653, Mary Johnson.

d. by a fall 8 Jan, 1687, aged 80. (As this is the same date and age as given for Thomas Brown, it is probably an error. HRK)

RIGGS, RIGG, and RIGGES, applied to some family whose place of abode was on elevated land, or to "hill dwellers", occupants of land on a range of hills; denoting a hardy, sturdy race of people. RIGG, in Celtic, when not locally applied, had reference to a king, whence Regan, "son of a king, or young king". RIGGS, in Danish, is from "rig", meaning wealthy, affluent, sometimes in possessions and money, and again in social and learned attainments.

The RIGGS family, here given, were distinctively English, but from whence they originated has not been discovered. There were Riggsses in Suffolk, Devonshire, Lincolnshire, and London, and other municipalities in England for many generations previous to the emigration to New England. There is reason to believe Thomas Riggs was of London, but no satisfactory proof.

I had questioned the correctness of the date of arrival of Thomas Riggs. Mrs. Barclay wrote: "It is probably unknown and a guess was made by someone, or whoever wrote it may have meant the year 1655 instead of 1635, which would be more logical. Or it may be a printer's error.

"There would be no place so early where he could have loarned the profession of scrivener in this country except in some educated man's family to which he might have been attached or bound out to learn the profession, but I think there would be some sort of record mentioned if such were the case."

FAMILY GROUP #1

2 THOMAS RIGGS

He M. (2nd) Oct. 30, 1695, Elizabeth Fress, who d.
June 17, 1722.

Thomas Riggs¹ first appears in Gloucester, Mass., at the date of his marriage, 1658. He had a grant of land the same year, of six acres of upland lying on Little River, and 7 Oct. 1661 bought of Coe and the Wakleys, houses, gardens and home lots on the south side of Goose Cove. By grant and purchase he acquired other lots of land, and was at one time the largest owner in the common territory.

His superior attainments would indicate that he was from a family of position in England. Tradition has it that he was educated for the profession of scrivener, and this is substantiated by his capable performance.

He was town clerk from 1665 to 1716, a selectman between 1669 and 1705, representative to the general court 1706. He aided in the erection and maintenance of both saw and grist mills. He inaugurated a system of schools, and was schoolmaster many years, and promoted the welfare of church and other town institutions. He was one of the most capable men among the early settlers of the period, and in various ways was identified with the growth and development of the town. By his influence and activities he contributed largely to the prosperity of Gloucester in the early years of its history.

In defence of the rights and liberties of the people, he stood with Jeffrey Parsons, Thomas Millett (his father-in-law), William Sargent and others; so that Gov. Andros and his oppressive measures received little favor at their hands, although they were subjected to penalties for their action.

He lived a long and useful life. The town appears to have appreciated the value of his services and rewarded them accordingly. He received several grants of land. Many of his descendants continued to live in the town and neighborhood for several generations.

Thomas settled on the west side of Annisquam river, and lived there during his lifetime. He does not appear to have taken a prominent part in town affairs, but was owner of several parcels of land, receiving some of them by grant in the division of town lands and others by purchase.

His will, proved Oct. 18, 1756, made provision that his wife Ruth should have "the room in the dwelling house which she pleased to live in, and that his sons Aaron and Joshua should furnish every year, while she remained his widow, ten bushels of good Indian corn, two bushels of good malt, and firewood at the door; also to keep for her use a good cow and six sheep." His will mentions "daughter Ann Richardson." He left to each daughter thirty pounds.

MILLETT: Diminutive of Miles. "Romance of Names".

MILLETT is a French surname of ancient date. The name is not common in England, though Thomas Millett, immigrant ancestor, came from an English family that had been some generations in England. The Millett family was among the most respectable inhabitants of Marazion, a town about three miles from Penzance, county Cornwall, England. In the time of Queen Elizabeth's reign William Millett was high sheriff of the county. Rev. James Millett was vicar of the parish of St. John forty-four years, and the family was found in the vicinity for several generations. (No relationship is stated - HRK)

Two early settlers came to New England. Of Richard Millett it is only known he became freeman June 11, 1635. It may be that he was the father of Thomas.

Thomas Millett, with his wife and son Thomas came from London, England in the "Elizabeth" in 1635. He was the only one of the name among the early settlers.

Thomas Millett, freeman 1637. They remained in Dorshes-ter several years. In 1655 they went to Gloucester, where he was a preacher, succeeding William Perkins who had been teaching Elder of the church, and from whom he bought all the property he owned there. In 1668 James Travis sold his house and land, in Gloucester, to Thomas Millett, Sen.

He was accorded the title "Mister" given only ministers and men of superior birth or station. Though not an ordained minister, he labored in spiritual affairs, and the court records show that he received compensation for his work.

Before King Philip's war, he removed to Brookfield, Mass. There is evidence that he succeeded Mr. Younglove as minister at Brookfield in 1674, though his name does not appear in any list of the inhabitants, extant. Thomas Millett, #8 on a list of 16 for house-lots in Brookfield, received a grant of a home-lot of "20 acres, and 10 acres of meadow". "Millett's meadow", often named in later records, commemorates a part of this grant. He was living in Brookfield June 5, 1675, when he gave consent to the sale of land on Town Neck, Gloucester, which his son Nathaniel sold to Francis Norwood, Feb. 10, 1710/1.

He died early in 1676. His wife died in Gloucester Sept. 27, 1682. The inventory of his estate, left in his wife's possession, and presented to Probate Court Sept. 28, 1676, amounted to 128 pounds, and contains items of various lands in Gloucester.

The deposition of Samuel Warner, dated Mar. 26, 1678, shows that Millett bought land in Brookfield and had a grant of land from that town.

The Cornish word for a mine is Huel or Wheal, and from this some authorities derive the surname Wheeler, or Whealer, its oldest form. The name is spelled sixteen different ways, more or less. Variations are Wheler, Whealer, Whaller, Wheller, Whelyer, and Wheyler. The name is found in Gloucestershire and bordering counties in England.

Many of the immigrants came from Kent County, England. Among them was Moses, born in 1638, who was one of the settlers of New Haven. He married Miriam Hawley. The first to found a home in the New World was Henry Wheeler, who was living in Virginia in 1620.

Dominy (Dominick) Wheeler M. June 3, 1588 at St. Edmunds, Salisbury, England, Mercy Jelly. He lived in New Salem, Wiltshire. His will of Dec. 12, 1615, proved Feb. 16, 1616, mentions his wife, Mercy, and his son John and wife Annie and John and Edward, sons of his son John.

A note from Mrs. Barclay states: John¹ Wheeler was first of Hampton, then Salisbury and finally Newbury where he died; all dates verified. His will is printed in Essex Probate records and although he made no bequest to son Henry (probably had received his portion already) he is named sole executor.

He was a barber by trade, which profession, in that day, partook somewhat of a surgeon and embodied among other duties cupping and leaching. He was a farmer.

He was in Agawam, now Ipswich, for about a year, went to Hampton, N. H. soon after the town was settled. He received land in Salisbury, Mass. in 1641. He removed to Newbury before 1650, but was still taxed in Salisbury 1652.

His will bequeaths to: son David, sons John and Adam of Salisbury, England; to son William (if he come over into this country); to daughters Mercy, Elizabeth Button and Ann Chase; to Susanna, wife of his son George, and to his children: Ephraim and Samuel; to Roger's children Mary and Joseph; to daughter Elizabeth's children, Thomas, Mary and Elizabeth; to daughter-in-law Susanna the land formerly given to her husband George, on which he built.

Cutter, 1914.

This name is one of the most frequently met in the United States, and is represented by many distinct families. Its use arises from the Christian name, which is very ancient. In the roll of Battle Abbey, Fitz-Aleyne (son of Allen) appears. One of the first using Allen as a surname was Thomas Allen, sheriff of London in 1414. There are many coats-of-arms, and many different spellings. There were more than a score of emigrants of this surname, from almost as many different families, who left England before 1650 to settle in New England.

Romance of Names - Weekly: -

Allen, of French introduction.

A Breton name which came in with the Conquest.

A baptismal name used unaltered as a surname.

HRK Special note! Since we have two William Allens in our ancestry, care should be taken to distinguish them.

William Allen, the progenitor of the line of Catherine, was of Manchester, England, and was among those who planted the settlement of Manchester in New England.

The other William Allen (Allin, in the early records) is also in the Richardson (#1) group. He helped found Salisbury, where he died. His daughter, Abigail, married Henry Wheeler, and their daughter Ann is said to have probably married Thomas Riggs, of Gloucester. Evidence makes it a strong probability.

There is also a Thomas Allyne, belonging in the Kent ancestry.

He was a man of energy, who by his enterprise and upright character helped to plant the new settlement. He was one of the Dorchester company of planters that went to Cape Ann, now Gloucester; in 1623, and thence he went to Salem, in 1626, with Roger Conant. In Salem records he is called an "influential and enterprising citizen."

Admitted freeman May 18, 1631. He and his wife Elizabeth were members of the First Church of Salem. He had a grant of 50 acres of land in Salem in 1636. In 1638 he had an additional grant of an acre of salt marsh land, and in 1642 he and Robert Allen were granted 10 acres each at the great pond, now Wenham lake. Robert, living in Salem in 1636, is said to be a brother.

May 1640: William Allen and sixteen others presented a petition to the General Court for permission to remove to Jeffries creek and plant a settlement there. Jeffries creek is the part of Salem which afterward was set off to form the town of Manchester. This move was made about 1640, and in the following years he sold his lands in Salem. He was one of the selectmen of Manchester on the incorporation of that town in 1645. He was a carpenter and built the first house on the plain. Tradition says he built the first saw mill on the stream which then took the name of Sawmill brook.

This ancient family is traced, by antiquarians, to John Leach (LeLoche) surgeon to Edward III, of England. His name is believed to have been derived from his calling. Arms of the family bear three crowns. When the kings of France and Scotland were prisoners of Edward, the three were dined at the home of John Leach. On leaving the house King Edward gave to his host three crowns. When later, as a further mark of royal esteem, a large estate in lands was granted Leach, these emblems (three crowns) were placed on his arms.

Laurence Leach is said to be descended from this family, though the line of descent is not given.
